BUGS Farmer's Market

This event has already occurred.

The kids of the BUGS programs are selling their own-grown seedlings, veggies, annuals, and herbs. They'll also feature artworks, foods, performances, BBQ, and more.

CRITIC'S PICK

The 50-some third through fifth graders who make up the Baltimore Urban Gardening with Students (BUGS, natch) after school program wanna show you what they've been doing lately and, no, you won't hang it on but place it in your fridge. The kids have been growing, harvesting, and cooking along with learning the ins and outs of running a business and their Farmers' Market showcases their hard work (pictured). Along with edibles, plants, and seeds, they're selling jewelry, art, and ceramics also created by the group. Rain or shine, because biz is biz. (Wendy Ward)
